The Center for Education Reform has published the ninth edition of one of its most-in-demand publications, the newly updated, National Charter School Directory 2004. The Directory profiles the 2,996 charter schools that are operating for the 2003-2004 school year, serving 741,949 children in 37 states and the District of Columbia. Included are the 309 schools that opened their doors this past fall and the 63 new schools already approved to open next year. As the authoritative source on America's charter schools, the Directory provides the only comprehensive listing of the nation's nearly 3,000 charter schools by state and provides a valuable snapshot of information on each, including: grades served and the number of students enrolled in each school, descriptions of the schools' programs and curricula, specialty schools and state maps plotting school locations. Copies of CER's 9th Edition of the National Charter School Directory may be purchased for $67.95 plus shipping and handling by contacting the Center at (202) 822-9000 or you can place your order via our website. PLEASE NOTE: The Directory is not available on-line or in an electronic format. Other recent charter school publications from CER include: Charter School Laws Across the States: Ranking Score Card and Legislative Profiles: A study and evaluation of the nation's 41 charter school laws for $39.95 + shipping and handling. Charter Schools Today: Changing the Face of American Education: A Record of Success: A study that tracks the progress state-by-state of charter schools using state data, reports and evaluations. Charter Schools Today: Changing the Face of American Education: Statistics, Stories and Insights. Soon to be released, four reports: from data tracking the growth of schools and enrollment, to a look at how a school operates, to the successes and obstacles a school faces, and, finally, how charters are an example of the most accountable schools in all of public education chronicle the impact of charter schools on American Education.
